In the open valley of Pickering, this route flows through ancient woodland and is a great spot for bird watching and spring bluebells. Several other footpaths branch off to take you exploring through the woods or climbing towards the summit, which is the highest point for miles within an area dominated by flat agricultural land. Please note: these extra paths are less suitable for wheelchairs and pushchairs.

Route Description:

Starting from the car park (point 1), walk through the gap in the fence by the noticeboards to join the start of the path. This takes you clockwise around the Barff. Keep following the footpath all the way round – there is not much navigation involved in this route so you can relax and take in the beautiful surroundings!

At point 2, the path meets a tarmac access road; cross the road to continue on the path. Please note: the next section up to point 3 is the steepest climb on the route. The path then bears right and takes you back towards the car park (point 1).
